REPORT

An Orientation Program on "Code of Conduct and Ethics" for the newly joined faculty members.

The program aimed to provide new faculty members with an understanding of the code of conduct and ethics of the university and to promote a culture of integrity, professionalism, and ethical behavior among them.

The program was attended by more than 22 newly joined faculty members from various departments of the college. The sessions were conducted by Dr. Badarinarayanan, Dean-Academic.

The program covered various topics related to the code of conduct and ethics, including an overview of the college policies on academic integrity, conflicts of interest, professional responsibility, and ethical behavior. The program also provided practical insights into maintaining high standards of conduct and ethical behavior in teaching, research, and service.

The first session focused on the importance of academic integrity and the university's policies on plagiarism, research misconduct, and cheating. The session discussed the consequences of violating the code of conduct and ethics and the importance of upholding the standards of academic integrity in all aspects of work.

The second session focused on conflicts of interest and professional responsibility. The session discussed the various situations where conflicts of interest could arise, such as in research funding, collaboration, and consulting, and provided strategies to manage and avoid such conflicts. The session also highlighted the professional responsibilities of faculty members, such as mentoring students, engaging in community service, and contributing to the academic community.

The third session focused on ethical behavior and the importance of promoting a culture of integrity and ethical behavior in the university. The session discussed the ethical principles and values that guide the behavior of faculty members, such as honesty, respect, fairness, and accountability. The session also provided practical strategies to maintain high standards of ethical behavior in teaching, research, and service.

The program concluded with a feedback session where the participants shared their experiences and feedback on the program. The participants appreciated the insights shared by the speaker and the practical strategies provided to maintain high standards of conduct and ethical behavior in the university.

Overall, the orientation program on "Code of Conduct and Ethics" provided a platform for newly joined faculty members to gain insights and knowledge on the code of conduct and ethics of the college. The program equipped them with the necessary skills and knowledge to maintain high standards of conduct and ethical behavior in teaching, research, and service, thereby promoting a culture of integrity, professionalism, and ethical behavior in the college.
