On 22nd and 23rd January 2022, a Faculty Development Programme (FDP) on Professional Ethics was conducted at our Campus. The FDP aimed to educate faculty members on the importance of professional ethics in teaching, research, and academic administration. The programme was organized by the IQAC, and the sessions were conducted by Dr. Sivakumar, an expert in professional ethics.

Key Takeaways:

During the FDP, Speake highlighted the following key takeaways on professional ethics:

Responsibility and Accountability: Faculty members have a responsibility to maintain high ethical standards in their teaching, research, and academic administration. They should be accountable for their actions and decisions and should always act in the best interest of their students, colleagues, and institution.

Honesty and Integrity: Faculty members should always be honest and act with integrity. They should not engage in plagiarism, falsification of data, or any other form of academic misconduct. They should also avoid conflicts of interest and ensure that their research is impartial and unbiased.

Respect and Fairness: Faculty members should respect the rights and dignity of their students and colleagues. They should treat everyone fairly and without discrimination. They should also maintain confidentiality and privacy when dealing with sensitive information.

Professional Development: Faculty members should engage in continuous professional development and stay up-to-date with the latest trends and developments in their field. They should also mentor and guide their students to develop their own ethical principles and values.
